SEEK EVIDENCE OF SMUGGLING

Mexicans Reported to Have Taken Arms Across the Border.

(Special to The Herald)
El Paso, May 19.—Agents of the U. S. Department of Justice are searching along the border of New Mexico for evidence of a gigantic smuggling plot alleged to have had the backing of Mexican consuls. The search is being conducted today under the leadership of H. E. Stone, chief agent here of the Department of Justice, who has been given a military escort for the work of running down the conspirators. Word reached Stone several days ago that Mexicans were smuggling American arms and ammunition across the border in large quantities. In a raid last night on a Mexican house in Douglas, Arizona, the military posse found a complete wireless plant, 40 rifles, and thousands of rounds of ammunition.

Behalf.

(Special to The Herald)
Washington, May 19.—Unless some word is received within the next few hours, President Wilson is going to make further inquiry of the American embassy at London regarding the fate of Jeremiah Lynch. All morning the White House and state department were anxiously awaiting a reply to the message sent to Ambassador Page last night instructing him to intervene in Lynch's behalf. The only word from London was a cable sent yesterday saying that the American embassy had been informed at Dublin that Lynch, who was a naturalized American, had been found guilty by a field court martial of complicity in the recent Irish rebellion. President Wilson is gravely concerned over the case.

Investigating the Irish revolt. The request was made by Mr. Birrell himself, who tried to persuade the war office that a display of military force in the streets of Dublin might stay off the threatened uprising. After Mr. Birrell testified the committee adjourned until Monday. It is believed the commission will transfer its sittings to Dublin next week.

The prisoners were taken to Madera and turned over to the Carranza garrison there. The bandits claimed to have no connection with Villa, but admitted they were banded together to fight American and Carranza troops.

KITTERY POINT

The funeral service for Everett Lammont Moulton was held at the First Christian church this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. E. H. Anderson of Dover conducted the service with well chosen scriptural passages and words of comfort for the bereaved. Albert J. Sprague, rendered, "Looking This Way," "Shall We Meet Beyond the River," and "No Burden Yonder." Mr. Moulton's death came as a shock to his relatives and friends. Although not feeling well on Friday last, he went to his duties at the navy yard as usual, and on returning to his home after the day's work, was suffering from a severe cold which quickly developed into pneumonia. Everything possible was done to arrest the progress of the disease, but to no avail and death claimed him after an illness of four days. Mr. Moulton was born in Kittery on August 30, 1877, and was the son of Samuel A. Moulton and Mary S. Moulton. He was quiet and unassuming in his manner and of fine character, which won for him the respect of all who knew him. A large circle of friends extend tender sympathy to the wife, little ones and relatives, and to the twin brother who was so closely associated with him. Mr. Moulton is survived by his wife, two children, Ralph, aged 7, and Elizabeth, aged 4; one sister, Maude Moulton, and three brothers, his twin brother Edward J. Moulton, Elroy S. Moulton and Fred Moulton of Portsmouth. Interment took place in the church cemetery in the family lot. There were many beautiful flowers. SAYS CARPENTER WANTED TO 'BEAT UP' WIFE'S CALLER

BOSTON MAN TELLS OF EXPERIENCE WHILE SPYING ABOUT COTTAGE AT MAGNOLIA

Concord, N. H., May 18.—"I'm going to 'beat up' that fellow; I'm going over to beat him up."

Those were the words which Maj. Ralph G. Carpenter uttered on the night of Sept. 1, last, at Magnolia, when he saw his wife, "Quita" embracing and kissing J. Gould Day on the porch of the Gables cottage, according to today's testimony of John J. Green, investigator for a Boston law firm. Green was testifying for Maj. Carpenter in his libel for divorce on the ground of unfaithfulness.

"I said to Mr. Carpenter: 'If you love your wife, it is a trying moment; but if you go over, some one is going to get hurt, either Mr. Day, your wife or yourself.' So he didn't go," continued Green.

"I went to Magnolia on Sept. 1, with instructions to see if Mrs. Carpenter was conducting herself properly," said Green. "That evening I saw Mr. Day join Mrs. Carpenter on the porch of the cottage, and they remained together until after midnight. Another time she was in his lap."

"That evening I saw Day embrace Mrs. Carpenter. I saw his arms around her waist. I saw their lips together. They were sitting in one chair at the time with their heads together. I saw her go into the cottage. Day followed. Where they went I do not know."

It was at this point that the witness said Maj. Carpenter said he was going to "beat up" Day.

Paul Black, night watchman of Oceanside Hotel Annex, testified: "On the night of Sept. 1 I flashed a light in a corner of the porch, and I saw Mrs. Carpenter jump up quickly from the arm of a chair or from Day's lap."

"On the night of Sept. 6 I saw Mrs. Carpenter go into the cottage followed by Day. They went into a spare bedroom which was not being used at the time. The door was left ajar."

EGYPTIENNE STRAIGHTS Cork Tips Plain Ends CIGARETTES

More Sledgehammer Blows to Establish the Law of Truth in Your Mind, Mr Smoker:

A FEW days ago we told you how Factory Manager Vale of the EGYPTIENNE STRAIGHTS factory in New York City made affidavit that none but the purest Turkish tobacco entered the STRAIGHTS factory—how Receiving Clerk Boyd of that factory swore that he had never seen any but pure Turkish tobacco bearing the original Turkish markings, and coming from bonded warehouses, enter the STRAIGHTS factory. We told you about the statement that Vice-President O'Brien addressed to the Smoking Public expressing such faith in the purity and goodness of STRAIGHTS that he was certain of their popularity with all who tried them. Copies of the original documents were presented in that advertisement for your inspection.

Please look at the pictures in this advertisement very carefully. They are well worth your attention. Three were photographed especially to prove to the cigarette smokers of America the care used ten thousand miles away from where STRAIGHTS are made in the initial operation, namely, the gathering of the finest Turkish leaf.

The American Tobacco Company maintains offices and warehouses throughout the tobacco districts in Turkey, under the direction and supervision of resident buyers for the company. They get nothing but the best, because the farmers have confidence and faith in these buyers, whom they have known intimately for years, as well as the great company they represent.

A great many cigarette manufacturers buy their tobaccos from importers in New York City, but The American Tobacco Company, with its exceptional organization and enormous resources, goes further than these other concerns.

First, by having in the organization resident buyers in Turkey; secondly by having them on the ground constantly, ready to take advantage of every situation in the crop that may arise, and, thirdly—Mr. Charles Skinner.

Have you ever heard of Mr. Charles Skinner? Probably not, and yet if you are a cigarette smoker, he has played a most important part in your joy of living. He is the Supreme Court sitting in judgment on all the Turkish Tobacco purchased by The American Tobacco Company. Quiet, unassuming, never attracting attention to himself, his opinion is the most prized in the world on Turkish leaf. Tobacco passing every other inspection, merely at a glance, will be rejected by him for Straights.

He is a busy bee—now in Turkey, travelling throughout the tobacco districts of Serres, Mahala, Zighlina, Drama, Provista, Smyrna, Cavalla and Edirnidjik looking at the crops and making his purchases in the field and now in America in the Straights factory. Here very often you will see him on the seventh floor looking at a bale of tobacco as shown in one of the above pictures. When the bale is opened his practiced eyes detect instantly if it has suffered water damage on the trip across, knowing if the leaves are too dark it will smoke too heavy, and must not be used in Straights. No other concern in America can boast of an asset like Charles Skinner.

In our next statement concerning EGYPTIENNE STRAIGHTS we are going to acquaint you more fully with the wonderful STRAIGHTS factory and the man who is responsible for its marvelously efficient management. The invitation to visit the STRAIGHTS factory we will dwell upon more fully. We insist upon your coming and seeing for yourselves, thus hoping to impress you to the fullest extent with the purity and excellence of STRAIGHTS and their manufacture.

Remember—we want everybody who can to visit the Straights factory, 337-347 West 27th Street, New York City. Your name and address on a postal will bring the card of invitation at once.

Good Uses of Wealth.

There is frequent and loud complaint against the power of great aggregations of wealth, and where this is wrongfully used it is just cause for complaint. Nevertheless, we should not in the hurly-burly of the age overlook the fact that the public receives many large benefits at the hands of the millionaires, most of whom are as human as their fellows and as well disposed toward mankind, notwithstanding the habit, perhaps too common, of regarding them as more or less the enemies of society and the oppressors of those who have to work for a living.

That great wealth is sometimes used for wrong purposes is a matter of common knowledge, but this should not blind us to the fact that in many instances it is most generously used for the benefit of the public or such portion of the people as need the special assistance provided.

A recent case of this kind is reported from New York, where by the will of a wealthy dry goods merchant provision is made for the erection and maintenance of a large apartment house for the use of unmarried working women. The building will cost in the neighborhood of $400,000 and will contain every modern convenience, including a library, and in the building there will be a restaurant for the benefit of the occupants, conducted without profit.

And this is only one of many instances of generosity on the part of people of wealth. Many hospitals, libraries and other institutions for the public good have been established or endowed by thoughtful and considerate men of wealth, and the public that reaps the benefits should not be too hasty or harsh in criticism of those whose ability and foresight have enabled them to go to the front in the great business enterprise of the time.

That the power of wealth is sometimes abused is true. There is a well grounded feeling that it makes itself felt in legislation and in monopoly, and where such abuses arise they should be suppressed with all the power at the command of a free people. But the possession of wealth is not in itself a crime, and when so much of it is used for the good of the public it is proper to remember that the accumulation of large fortunes is not an unmitigated evil. Wealth has its uses as well as its abuses, and that the former so far outnumber the latter is to the credit of the men whose ability enables them to accumulate it through honorable business methods.

The heavy heel of the government has come down upon the Associated Bill Posters of the United States, whose work is declared by Federal Judge Landis of Chicago to be not merely in restraint of trade, but one which results in total exclusion. And the decree of Judge Landis is liable to stand in this case. The bill posters are little fellows and must toe the scratch. All remember what happened when this same Judge Landis imposed a fine of $29,000,000 on one of the leading corporations of the country a few years ago. The sentence read well, but it was never complied with.

France is said to have invented an artificial hand that works almost as well as the natural hand. It is a pity that some genius cannot invent artificial men with which to fill the armies. Then the war could go on indefinitely without bloodshed and loss of life, and perhaps "honor" would be just as well preserved. But it sometimes seems as if the human race has an appetite for blood-letting at times, and if this is so armies of artificial men would utterly fail to fill the bill.

A former prosperous New York broker whose luck went against him a few years ago has found useful if not profitable employment of late in shoveling in the streets of the metropolis. It might be as well for the country if more of the sharks of Wall Street were thus engaged.

A southerner suggests that American rattlesnakes would be a good thing for the armies of Europe to turn loose upon one another, apparently ignoring the fact that the snakes would be a mighty dangerous brand of ammunition to handle.

The time it takes for the American forces to get after Villa, the bandit, would indicate that "watchful waiting" in connection with Mexican affairs is not confined to the White House.

The weather of late has been notable chiefly for its abundance.

URGES PASTORS TO PREACH ON PEACE

Ex-President Taft Suggests That Sermons for May 21 Be Based on That Subject.

(Special to The Herald)

New York, May 18.—Ex-President William H. Taft, as head of a special committee on Church Co-operation, has written to 15,000 ministers throughout the country, asking them to embody in their sermons on May 21, (the third Sunday in May which in a good many churches is observed as "Peace Sunday") an explanation of the program of the League to Enforce Peace, which is to hold its first annual assemblage on May 26 and 27.

Other signatures to the letter are those of L. T. Wilson, Methodist Bishop of New York; Shailer Mathews, president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America; the Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, the Rev. J. B. Remondy, Rev. Arthur J. Brown, Hamilton Holt and Fred B. Smith.

Mr. Taft is president of the League to Enforce Peace, which was formed at Philadelphia, in Independence hall last June, when a platform was adopted which proposed the establishment of an international court and council of conciliation by a league of nations, which should pledge its joint economic and military forces to prevent any signatory from beginning hostilities or declaring war, over any question until it had first tried judicial methods.

Ministers in Portsmouth to whom letters were sent are Rev. Alfred Gooding, Rev. William P. Stanley, and Rev. Percy W. Caswell.

Enclosed with the letter from Mr. Taft and others, was an "Open Letter to the Ministers of America on the Moral Challenge of the War," which reads in part as follows:

The present war has challenged the moral integrity of the world. For years we have preached the ideals of peace and have hurled indictments against war. While the world was at peace it was easy to feel that we had done our duty and discharged our responsibility when we had lifted our voice against war in pulpit, in university, and in the market place. A long period of peace had lulled the world into a false security. We did not feel a driving urgency about our work for international peace. We were going along quietly doing what we could to educate public opinion against war, but we did not feel an immediate responsibility for devising actual machinery of international organization that would make war less probable.

Then there burst upon the world over night the most brutal, the most ruthless, and the most gigantic war of history. The flower of human brotherhood that the Christian forces of the world had been watering and nurturing for centuries was withered by the hot breath of hate. The results of years of struggle for social justice, for democracy, and for larger opportunity for the common man, were thrown on the scrap heap and all the energies of mind and heart were harnessed to the machinery of war.

This war has taught us that the most urgent, the most necessary, the most fundamentally religious duty now before us is the devising and adopting of some method other than war for settling the disputes that are bound to arise between nations.

The best thinking of the world as well as all the lessons of history indicate that the only method by which the dangers of war can be practically eliminated, is by substituting law for war among nations, just as we have substituted law for war among individuals within the nations.

There is no reasonable ground to hope that the nations of the world will at this stage go so far as to disarm and create an international army and navy to police the world. We have not got that far in international affairs. But we have got to the point where there is ground to hope that at the end of this war the community of nations will do what every primitive community sooner or later does, namely: In a primitive community when the honor of the women and the property of the town are no longer safe from outlaws, all men, even the most peace loving, unite in forming a Vigilance Committee, in which they agree to use their combined force to see that outlaws are kept down and the peace of the town maintained.

The United States is today in exactly the position of a man of peace in a frontier town. It is our duty to suggest and stand ready to join an international Vigilance Committee, in which the nations of the world shall join in saying that they will use their combined power if necessary to force any nation with a grievance to submit its difficulty to an international court or council of conciliation before declaring war.

It seems practically possible that at the end of this war the nations will be willing to enter a League to enforce the submission of all disputes to an international court or council of conciliation for a complete examination.

CURRENT OPINION

Unless Prepared to Defend It We May Lose the Panama Canal.

A wise government will take immediate action for preparation against aggression. Persons who believe that after this war is over the nations of Europe will be incapable of offensive warfare have read amiss or have ignored the facts and precedents of history.

I tell you unless we are prepared to meet the allied fleets of powers which will undoubtedly prepare to attack us we will lose the Panama Canal or at least be forced to neutralize it.

The Monroe doctrine is only a declaration of national defense, but it amounts to nothing more than an empty declaration if we are unable to defend it. It is no sentimental declaration of affection for any south or central American republic.—By Albert B. Fall, Senator from New Mexico.

before war can be declared. Beyond that it is doubtful whether they will go. It is doubtful whether the nations will agree to submit to the enforcement of the decisions of such a court. It is practically certain that the nations will not disarm for years to come. Shall we not, therefore, take the one step that is possible? Shall we not say that if nations must arm, the armaments shall be used to support law rather than to break it?

PEOPLE and THINGS

From the press reports of the State of Maine, it is apparent that New Hampshire had a narrow escape from a freshet yesterday, and we are exceedingly fortunate that our rail communications are not cut off. A traveling man stated to the writer this morning that he left Augusta, Me., at 4:30 in the afternoon and arrived in Lewiston at 2 o'clock in the morning. The usual time required for this trip is about an hour and a half. Lakes and rivers are the rule in all open territory.

The chain entertainment novelty suggested by local women for the benefit of the new Army and Navy Seaman's Home has caught on and is a popular course in practically every neighborhood in the city. The idea has swept the west as an easy way of raising money for charitable and other purposes. If you join it you simply invite three friends to your home, an auto ride, or for an entertainment, and they pay you fifty cents, which you turn over to the fund, and when they join they agree that they will give a like party or entertainment. It is a fine idea and no better way could women of this city assist in building the new home.

The journeymen carpenters are now settled, for two years at least, with a new scale of wages, and the master carpenters are in hopes that they will be able to do more work at the new scale than they did at the old, and thus save any additional cost of the work. Some of the contractors were left with new construction work on their hands which they figured at the old price. Local labor conditions appear to be settled for a while at least.

Portsmouth is going to have a branch of the Filtrine Publicity Association. It will have to do with promoting publicity in the interest of Portsmouth. The association will be organized within the next month.

Shipping circles were much interested in the announcement in this paper yesterday of the return of the steamer Sightseer at this port. She is a speedy craft and excellent for the Shoals line.

Announcement in another column reports an early sailing of the survey ships Eagle, Lombard, Hamblin, and Paducah of Southern waters for Portsmouth via New York. The boys will be indeed happy to get into northern waters, and particularly Portsmouth. It is evident that some of the ships do not like the idea of going to New Orleans.

The local sentiment appears to be growing in favor of Theodore Roosevelt and the betting is practically two to one that he will be nominated at Chicago. Should he be nominated and elected the Portsmouth navy yard will come into its own.

Just when Portsmouth is in a fair way of securing new industries and, in fact, has succeeded in adding two to our three during the past month, the Board of Public Works has announced an increase in water rates, which particularly affects the local industries. It does seem as though the men charged with the performance of duty connected with the proper handling of city affairs ought to take a broader view of things. It has been claimed for many years that little or no encouragement was offered new industries in the way of low taxes and other costs. Certain influential citizens have been expending money and time in an effort to bring live concerns here. With the proper administration of the water department there is, in the opinion of many who are supposed to know, absolutely no necessity for any increase in rates.

Would that Portsmouth had a Frank Jones today. With the tremendous ship building boom that is to be launched, the big plant at Freeman's Point ere this would be in motion. There ought to be in New Hampshire some one with foresight enough to invest in the plant at Freeman's Point for the building of submarines and other small or large ships. There is a fine opportunity for some live New Hampshire men right here in Portsmouth.

It is hoped that local automobile owners will take an interest in the matter of participating in the Memorial day parade of the Grand Army to the extent of offering their machines to convey the veterans. You can send your name to this office for enrollment in this worthy enterprise.

Exeter, May 19.—The matter of holding a mock Republican national convention by the students of the Phillips-Exeter Academy, is being agitated. There are students at Exeter from nearly every state in the Union.

ROOSEVELT SPEAKS AT DETROIT

Attacks Henry Ford on Home Territory and Gives His Views on Preparedness

(Special to The Herald)

Detroit, May 19.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt spoke before an assembled crowd of several thousand here this afternoon, and many times during his speech he was interrupted by hearty applause.

Mr. Roosevelt came here to attack Henry Ford, the automobile manufacturer, on home ground, and he told his audience just what he thought of Mr. Ford and his peace plans.

Col. Roosevelt's speech in part was as follows:

I have been very reluctant to make speeches during these weeks immediately preceding the National Nominating Conventions, because it is very difficult to make people understand that speeches at such a time, and not of the ordinary political type, make in the interest of some particular individual's candidacy. But I finally determined that I would come here to Michigan to say certain things which I believe should be said at this time. What I have to say to you will not be in the interest of any man, and least of all of myself. It will not refer to the candidacy of any individual. It will not refer to the policy of any party, save as such party policy may, and ought to vitally concern the welfare of the nation. My speech will be devoted exclusively to stating great principles which should be fundamental in this great Democratic commonwealth of ours. Whenever I touch on an individual, it will be because I cannot make my meaning clear, save by speaking of individuals who embody of typical certain movements.

I come here to Michigan because in the journey for the selection of delegates to the Republican National Convention, Mr. Ford was victorious, and following on his victory here, he showed a marked popular strength in Nebraska and Pennsylvania. The effect of this showing has been immediately visible upon many of the politicians within and without congress. One of the leading anti-preparedness, or peace-at-any-price papers in New York recently commented with great satisfaction upon the defeat in the lower house of congress of the proposal to increase our regular army to 250,000 men. This paper stated that originally the proposal was defeated by only 22 votes, but when the vote came up again ten days ago, it was defeated by 73 votes. It continues (I condense): "Of these 221 negative votes, 51 were cast by Republicans, 49 being from the Central West what has come to be known as Henry Ford Territory. These included 6 of the 11 from Michigan—a notable change since it was proposed in the house. Since then Mr. Ford's large votes in Michigan and Nebraska have been recorded. All three Republican congressmen from Nebraska were opposed. If this is not a pretty clear indication as to prevailing anti-militarist temper in the Middle West, what can be? It is as well refreshing proof that there will be strong forces in both party conventions to throw their influence against the militarist plank of Mr. Roosevelt."

This situation makes it advisable to speak with courtesy, but of entire frankness of what the success of Mr. Ford means and is then to mean, and of the forces that have given Mr. Ford his strength. It is in Michigan, Mr. Ford's own state, where the Ford movement began, that I wish to say what I have to say on the subject.

For Mr. Ford personally, I feel not entirely friendly, but in many respects a very genuine admiration. There is much in the methods and very much in the purposes, with which he has conducted his business, notably in his relations to his working people that commands my hearty sympathy and respect. Moreover, there is always something attractive to an American in the career of a man who has risen himself from the industrial ranks, until he is one of the captains of industry. But all that I have thus said, can with truth be said of many, perhaps of most of the forces of the Revolutionary War and of many or most of the pacifists of the Civil War, the extremists among whom were popularly known as Copperheads. Many of the Tory and the Civil War pacifists were men of fine character and upright purpose, who sincerely believed in the cause they advocated. They included all the men who were the pacifists of their day. These pacifists who formed so large a portion of the old-time Tories and Copperheads abhorred and denounced the militarism of Washington in 1776 and of Lincoln in 1861. They were against all war and all preparedness for war. In the Revolutionary conflict they insisted that Washington be the embodiment of anarchic militarism. Their purpose was to get the "boys" of Bunker Hill and Valley Forge "out of the trenches" and bring them back to their homes and make them quit fighting. In 1861 they denounced Lincoln as a military dictator. They prayed peace as the greatest of all earthly blessings. They demanded that the war should cease, and they wished to get the "boys" of the Army of the Potomac "out of the trenches" before Christmas and bring them back to the farm, the shop and the counting house. If these pacifists of the Revolution and Civil War had had their way, they would have put an immediate stop to much suffering and much loss of life. They would have secured immediate peace. They would have averted some years of war. They would have turned men away from military training into the path of ordinary civil occupation. They would have secured the applause of every peace-at-any-price man at home and abroad. And unwittingly they would have utterly ruined this nation. They would have prevented its being a nation. They would have made the countrymen of Washington and the countrymen of Lincoln objects of scorn and derision, and they would have made of this great republic a laughing and a by-word among the nations of the earth. They would have purchased peace at the moment by ignoble submission to wrong, by ignoble cowardice. They would have rendered it certain in each case that, for the one war they averted at the moment, ten were ensured for the years to come. They would have piled up an immeasurable load of shame and suffering for their children and their children's children, not merely into the third and fourth, but into the ninth and tenth generations that were to come after them. This is what these good well-meaning pacifists of those days would have done if they had believed their purpose. This is what the pacifists of our day, the neo-Tories, the neo-Copperheads, will do if they achieve their purpose.

In any serious crisis there are always men who try to carry water on both shoulders. These men try to escape the hard necessity of choice between two necessarily opposite alternatives. In actual practice, this compromise usually proves to be coming with exquisite nicety all the defects and none of the advantages of both courses. It is true that in ordinary political matters compromise is essential. It is true that in ordinary times it is essential. But there come great crises when compromise is either impossible or fatal. This is one of those crises. There is no use in saying that we will sit ourselves to defend ourselves a little, but not much. Such a position is equivalent to announcing that, if necessary, we shall let, but that we shall only hit soft. The only right principle is to prepare thoroughly or not at all. The only right principle is to avoid hitting if it is possible to do so, but never under any circumstances to hit soft. To go to war a little, but not much, is the only absolutely certain way to ensure disaster. To prepare a little but not much, stands on a par with a city developing a fire department which after a fire occurs can put it out a little, but not much.

Yet in this moment the majority of our political leaders, either keep silent on the vital issues before our people, or else engage in conflicts which are almost meaningless because the men ranged on one side advocate total unpreparedness and the men ranged on the other side nervously deny that they desire any real and thoroughgoing preparedness. Such a condition of affairs speaks badly for this nation. I say "this nation" advisedly. I mean you and me, my fellow countrymen. The executive and legislative agents of the government at Washington ought, of course, to lead in the right direction. But ultimately, we, the people, have only ourselves to blame if they do not; for it is our fault if we permit them to lead us wrong. Therefore I wish you to understand that I am putting the blame primarily on us, the people, ourselves; although it is necessary, in order to avoid circumlocution, that I speak at times of our governmental agents.

"We, through our representatives at Washington, have absolutely refused in the smallest degree to prepare during these twenty-two months of world calamity. We have refused to learn the smallest part of the lesson being written on the scroll of torment in Europe. We have stubbornly refused to take the smallest step, either to do our duty to ourselves or to do our duty to others. We have endeavored to deceive ourselves by announcing that in this policy of supine inaction and of failure to perform duty, we are actuated by the loftiest motives. I doubt whether we have really deceived ourselves. There is not a nation in the world which believes that our course of conduct has been dictated by anything save timidity, unworthy shrinking from effort and responsibility, and cold and selfish love of money making and of soft ease.

We first hysterically announced that we would not prepare because we were afraid that preparation might make us lose our advantage ground as a peace-loving people. Then we became frightened and announced loudly that we ought to prepare; that the world was on fire; that our own national structure was in danger of catching flame; and that we must immediately make ready. Then we turned another somersault and abandoned all talk of preparedness; and we never did any more than talk. The net result is that there has been no preparation so far, because of what has happened in the great war. Congress is still in the conversational stage on the matter. There is no sign, as far as governmental action goes, that we have any appreciation of our danger, or of the needs of the country. No action has been taken to meet these needs. No action adequately to meet them is even contemplated.

The old Whig party was beaten by the Pro-Slavery democracy, and finally went out of existence, because it endeavored to be both for slavery and against it, and not too much of either. The party that was the party that was against slavery and for the Union and that stood aggressively for its principles. The party that has full confidence in its own policies and a concealed policy to put these policies into effect will sooner or later get the people to back it—provided the policies are sound. A party that is both for and against its own utterances has no right to complain if the people prove hesitant about giving it power. Why give it power when it does not say fearlessly what it expects to make of the power?

There are, at this time, two great issues before us, both inseparably bound together. They are the issues of Americanism and Preparedness. As a people we have to decide whether we are to be in good faith a people able and ready to take care of ourselves; or whether we doubt our national unity and fear to prepare, and intend instead to trust partly to our untimely ability in high places.

If we are to win at home against those of our fellow citizens who believe in the policy of unpreparedness, that is, of national weakness and inefficiency, we must have strong and well-reasoned convictions and express them with strength and sincerity. A considerable part of the strength of Mr. Ford in the primaries, and of the strength of the advocates of half-preparedness at Washington, comes from the fact that no real alternative of policy is offered with sincerity and fearlessness.

For sixteen months we have been employed in sending Germany ultimatum after ultimatum in monotonous succession, while Germany in equally monotonous succession sank ship after ship, drowning our men, women and children by the hundreds. (I use the word "ultimatum" in the sense that it has been given by our practice with both Mexico and Germany during the past three years—for under this condition an ultimatum is a note which is not ultimate, but an invitation to further correspondence, and is, on no account to be translated into action.) We have suffered as a nation from prolonged and excessive indulgence in notewriting; and incidentally we have made the discovery that notewriting is not an antidote to murder. The pacifists assured us that notewriting and similar intellectual exercises would avert all difficulties and keep foreign nations feeling friendly toward us. As a matter of fact, while we have been writing these notes, the loss of life among non-combatant men, women and children on the ships which were torpedoed and about which we wrote notes, has exceeded the total number of lives lost in both the Union and Confederate navies during the entire Civil War. Think of that friends! Such has been the net result of our notewriting; and incidentally we have incurred the contemptuous dis-

MOTHER FINDS HER RUNAWAY DAUGHTER HERE

Mrs. Gustave Yorkland of Haverhill, N. J., arrived in this city today in search of her daughter who eloped two weeks ago. She asked the assistance of Chief of Police Hurley, and the newly made bride was soon located at a lodging house on State street.

Her father had previously been in Dover looking for his daughter. Mrs. Yorkland found that her daughter, Dorothy had been married since Sunday last to William F. Widner of Long Branch, N. J., a salesman. She delivered the mother's lecture to the daughter for the manner in which she skipped out, but was obliged to make the best of it and finally extended her forgiveness.

The fact that Dorothy had changed her name prevented the mother from taking her back to the family fire-side.

A Miss Catherine Rice of Beverly, Mass., who Dorothy had met only a short time ago, also figured in the double wedding on Sunday, when she took the hand of Stanley Lazarus of New York City, a child of Widner's.

SUPPLY SHIP LAUNCHED AT BOSTON NAVY YARD

Vessel Named for Commodore Bridge, Well Known in This City and at One Time Part Owner of Seavey's Island

Many guests were present at the Boston naval station, Charlestown, Thursday morning, for the launching of the new United States naval supply ship Bridge, the first large vessel to leave the launching ways at the local navy yard in many years. It is believed that this new policy of the navy department at Washington means that other large ships will be constructed at Government stations.

The sponsor was Mrs. Granville Pierce of Memphis, Tenn. She is a grandniece of Pay Director Horatio W. Bridge, U. S. N., for whom the new supply ship which is designed to form a valuable adjunct to the navy, is named.

Among those invited to be members of the official launching party were Gov. Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts, Mayor James M. Curley of Boston and Capt. William R. Rush, commandant of the Charlestown yard. Following the launching ceremonies the guests proceeded to the residence of the commandant for luncheon.

The Bridge is 422 feet over all, 55 feet broad and 33 1/2 feet deep. Its cargo capacity will be 1775 tons with a total displacement of 3500 tons. When fully stocked this ship will be able to carry enough supplies for a fleet of eight battleships.

Mr. Bridge was well known in this city and was one of the very close friends of Franklin Pierce, New Hampshire's only son to become a president. Henry W. Longfellow and Nathaniel Hawthorne. These four men were classmates at Bowdoin college and were graduated together with the class of 1825. Commodore Bridge was born April 8, 1866.

In 1885 he was appointed a Paymaster in the United States navy and in 1891 he visited the African Coast on the U. S. S. Sagunto. Upon his return he published "The Journal of an African Cruise," which was edited by his class mate, Hawthorne. His other cruises were made on the Cyane, United States and Portsmouth.

For a number of years Commodore Bridge lived at Seavey's Island and this island was owned jointly by him and Captain Wise. It was sold by them to the government and at once became a part of the Portsmouth navy yard. At his house on the island, tradition reports that Hawthorne wrote one of his works and it is a well known fact that it was through pressure exerted by Commodore Bridge and Franklin Pierce that Nathaniel Hawthorne was persuaded to publish his works which later made him famous; they assisted him financially, for at the time he was not able to leave off his manual labor and attend to this work.

Commodore Bridge served in the navy for more than thirty-one years and he was appointed in 1884 by President Pierce, Chief of the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing, (now Supplies and Accounts) and he served at the head of this department until 1899, retiring with the rank of Commodore.

One other thing which draws attention to the close friendship between Horatio Bridge and President Pierce is the fact of Hawthorne's appointment to the post of Consul to Liverpool, England, one of the best paying posts in that branch of the service. This was instrumental in giving the author added opportunity to devote more of his time to his literary work and its publication.

The keel of the supply ship Bridge was laid with fitting ceremonies on June 12, 1915. The Charlestown yard had been the lowest bidder. Congress authorized a total expenditure of $1,425,000. She is 123 feet in length, has a breadth of 55 feet, draft of 21 feet and designed speed of 11 knots.

The Bridge is fitted with two propellers, operated by reciprocating engines. The boilers are designed to burn either coal or oil. A large part of the vessel is designed to carry large quantities of meats, butter, eggs, fresh vegetables and ice, and large, well-insulated refrigerating spaces are provided.

The building of the Bridge was in charge of Naval Construction Clayton M. Stimers. Chief Carpenter J. P. Yates directed the work of construction. This is the 63d warship to be built in the inner harbor, the old frigate Constitution having been the first.

PORTSMOUTH HIGH VS LYNN CLASSICAL HERE SATURDAY

Saturday afternoon the high school team will meet the Lynn Classical high school team. This promises to be one of the best high school games of the season. The Lynn Classical boys have defeated many of the best school teams about Boston and will come here with a clean record. The local team is determined to break this record if possible. Naturally the high school is under a large expense in bringing such a team as Lynn here and are taking the chance of losing heavily nevertheless it was thought worth the money to have Lynn appear in this city. Every baseball fan who can possibly find a way should see the game and they will not regret it afterwards. The rest of the local boys have been having during the first part of the week because of the weather has put them into prime condition and they will go after Lynn Classical as strong as any team that the Massachusetts boys have faced this year.

MULE COMES TO THE ENGINE CAB FOR HIS CANDY

Engineer Frank Whitten who handles the throttle of the locomotive on the Wolfboro and Boston passenger train every other day, is one man that is friendly with a mule. The animal knows Whitten well and also knows the train which he runs.

Every afternoon when this train reaches Greenland on the return from Boston when Whitten is in the cab, this mule attached to a milk delivery wagon walks up to the window of the locomotive as the train comes to a stop, and gets his lump of sugar, candy and other sweets, which the engineer keeps under the cab seat for the hybrid.

"Pete" appears to know the day when Engineer Whitten is not covering the run, and he throws a mournful gaze at the other engineer as the train passes but makes no move toward the big machine.

BILLY SUNDAY IN BOSTON.

Boston, May 18.—That Billy Sunday is going to bring the old-time religion to Bostonians was declared by the Rev. Dr. Floyd Tompkins, pastor of Holy Trinity Episcopal church, Philadelphia, speaking at a Sunday campaign meeting at the Park Street church. The speaker said that in Philadelphia Mr. Sunday preached two and sometimes three times a day for eleven weeks. He noted the great sincerity of the man, saying that he does not hesitate to use any and every means to drive his preaching home. "The expressions which he uses," said Dr. Tompkins, "are not vulgar. He uses the language of the street. The gospel he preaches is the old, old gospel. It is not the gospel paraded off a little mite to meet our consciences."

Those urging the government to open their oil lands and to start the manufacture of gasoline appear to have a pretty fair plan for reducing the selling price of this product. The parcel post system had a pretty good effect on the express companies.

like of all the great powers engaged in the war. As regards the loss of American lives, and the sinking of these ships, I hold Germany less responsible than I hold this nation. Germany is engaged in a life and death struggle and we need not expect that she will forego any advantage which the weakness or timidity of our nation, of this republic offers her. I firmly believe that if at the outset we had clearly made it evident that our world would be translated into deeds, that our first ultimatum sixteen months ago was really an ultimatum, Germany would have yielded, the Lusitania and the other ships would not have been sunk and all the lamentable loss of life would have been avoided. It is our own attitude of culpable weakness and timidity—an attitude assumed under the pressure of the ultra-pacifists—which is primarily responsible for this dreadful loss of life, and for our national humiliation.

The civilian training camp movement started at Plattsburg, and now in session at Fort Oglethorpe, is the great civic movement of Americanism. When crystallized along the lines of universal training for universal service it will become the most powerful agent for national democratic progress in our land.

Our young men need discipline. There can be nothing better for them than such training. It would set them up physically. It would give them knowledge of sanitation, of cleanliness. They would learn regularity of habits, abstinence, obedience, self-respect and respect for others. They would learn to handle and command men and get along with them. They would become infinitely more competent for the daily tasks of American life. In many respects Germany furnishes us an example we shall do well to heed, for she secures her people good government, orderly government and substantial economic efficiency combined with high industrial efficiency. We of the democracy hold that while good government is essential, what the world needs to learn is to govern itself. The worst men in any civilization are those who neither control themselves nor are controlled by others. In the long run lack of self-control means that there must be control from the outside. But the best men are the men who exercise self-control. The highest civilization can only exist in the nation that controls itself.

I wish to say a word to my fellow Americans who are in whole or in part of German blood. I very heartily advise them. I believe in them. I understand the difficulties under which they have labored for the past twenty-two months. I sympathize with them. I feel for them, even though I feel that many of them are not taking the position they ought to take. I know that what I preach to them is hard doctrine. But I believe it to be a doctrine necessary for them, and for their—and my—fellow countrymen. I do not address them as German-Americans, for I hold that here in the United States they will come to the country in which our children and children's children are to live—your children's children and mine, friends—if we permit ourselves to be sundered one from the other by the lines either of creed or of national origin.

I shall speak a word of my own uncertainty to illustrate the points I am about to make. Some two centuries and a half ago there were certain Dutch immigrants. Mechanics and small merchants in New York city, which was then called New Amsterdam. There were in eastern Pennsylvania two German peasant farmers who were among the founders of Germantown, having been driven out of the Palatinate when it was ravaged by the armies of Louis XIV; and west of them in Pennsylvania lived certain Irish, Welsh and English immigrants, the latter being Quakers, and in south Carolina and Georgia were certain Scotch and French Huguenot farmers. These men and women left many descendants who intermarried with one another. Our ancestors originally came from different countries, professed different creeds and spoke different tongues. But they became Americans and nothing else; and as the generations succeeded one another they did the ordinary work of American life. They fought in the War of the Revolution and again in the war of 1812; and they did not inquire whether the foreign foes whom Washington assailed were Germans, as at Trenton, or British as at Princeton, or French like those whom he fought near Plattsburg in his youth. If these old time Americans had kept apart from one another and had made their loyalty a loyalty to the countries from which they came, and not to this now great republic, and if their fellow citizens of that day had done the same thing, there would not be any United States now, and there would be no Americans to feel either pride or shame in what our people do.

My plea is that all our citizens today shall act in the spirit of the men of many different race strains—the Washingtons, Adamsses and Lees, the Schuylers and Sullivans; the Carrolls and Muhlenbergs, the Marions and Herkimeres—who disregarded all questions of national origin and became Americans and nothing else when they founded this country. It is not possible permanently to possess a divided national allegiance. If men are not whole hearted in their Americanism, if they try to combine loyalty to this land with loyalty to some other land, it is inevitable that to a greater or lesser degree they make the loyalty to another land overshadow their loyalty to this.

There has come into my possession a copy of a letter written by Professor Paul Appleman, of the University of Vermont. This letter was printed in the New York Times of April 5th. I have made careful inquiry and I find that the letter is unquestionably genuine. It was evidently written in answer to one from Dr. Rohrbach's correspondent in which the question was asked as to how German-Americans in the United States should vote on the question of preparedness. Evidently neither of the two Germans who were corresponding devoted a thought to the interest of the United States; they are considering only whether it was or was not of advantage to Germany that the United States should be kept helpless. Professor Rohrbach is a university lecturer in Berlin; he is the author of various works on economics and other subjects, and for a number of years the German Imperial Commissioner in Southwest Africa. He has been one of the most widely quoted of the German professors who in the present war have set forth German claims; and according to the "Vorwärts," many of his utterances can be taken as at least semi-official. This semi-official representative of the German government, writes from Berlin under the date of January 13, 1916, as follows, explaining why German-Americans should not favor preparedness (which he calls armament):

"It is perhaps open to question whether genuine German interests would derive benefit from American armaments. In order to form an opinion one would have to be able to foresee what lines the German policy will follow after the conclusion of peace and particularly how our relations with Japan will shape themselves. It seems to me quite conceivable that in an American-Japanese war we should adopt an attitude of very benevolent neutrality toward Japan and thereby make it easier for her to beat America. In that case why should we help on the American armament policy. I cannot see, therefore, that German political aims would be forwarded by facts by German-Americans lending themselves to the schemes for American armament."

Professor Rohrbach also speculates as to who may be "the next President after Wilson," saying: "If Roosevelt actually should become President again, which after all is not impossible, the German-Americans would then be found to have simply played 'his game for him.' As regards this statement of Professor Rohrbach, I very freely admit that no man ought to back me or support the policies for which I stand unless with the clear understanding that these are straight-out American policies, not policies in the interest of some other nation against my own, and that our citizens do 'play my game' precisely to the extent that they support such straight-out American policies."

I believe that the great mass of German-Americans are at the present day divided in their loyal devotion to this country. I know that our entire national government, from President down could be manned with men of German birth or descent who would be Americans and nothing else, who would stand for the United States first and for no other nation second. A large proportion of my closest friends, of the men in whom I most believe, are Americans of German origin, but they are Americans first and last, and only Americans.

I very earnestly wish that some way could be found for repudiating the men whose actions have made it possible for foreigners like Professor Rohrbach to write with the insolent belief that they can use our fellow-citizens of German birth and descent so that their political influence may be exerted in such fashion as to make this country helpless to defend itself against foreign aggression whether from Japan, from Germany, or from any other power. I should just as strongly denounce any man or birth of English descent or of any other birth or descent, who in the interest of their fatherland or of the country from which their ancestors sprung, advocated such action against the interest of America by Americans as is advocated in Professor Rohrbach's letter. We must all act as Americans; and we cannot afford to accept as our leaders either Germans or Englishmen, or men of any other foreign nationality.

I ask my fellow-citizens of German birth to remember whatever calamity befalls this country will make its effects felt on their children no less than mine. If Professor Rohrbach's disciples here succeed in shaping our action so that Japan in the interest of Germany, beats the United States, the shame and the disgrace, and the loss will be felt by your children, my fellow-citizens of German origin, no less than by mine. The conquerors who overcome us in such a war would not go out of their way to find out the different race strains of the people of the land. They would oppress all alike with grim impartiality. If New York were taken by Germany or by any other European power, or San Francisco taken by Japan, because we had failed to prepare to defend ourselves, the weight of the hand of the alien victor would be felt by all our citizens alike; and the story of our shame would be as evil for your children's children as for mine.

I make the same plea precisely to the Americans of German birth or descent that I always have made and always shall make to all Americans, no matter what their creed or their national origin. I am exactly as much opposed to English-Americans as to German-Americans. I oppose all kinds of hyphenated Americanism. I ask my fellow-Americans who are partly or wholly of German blood to show the foreign foes of America who, from abroad, instigate and guide our traitors at home, and above all I ask them to show these traitors at home—that the immense majority of Americans of German descent, whether naturalized or native born, are loyal Americans and nothing else; and that they stand for the honor and the interest of the United States shoulder to shoulder with all other good Americans of no matter what creed or national origin. Americanism is a matter of the spirit, not of birthplace or descent. Among the best Americans I have ever known, among the men closest to me in social and political life, are and have been, men born in, or men whose fathers were born in Germany, Ireland, the Scandinavian kingdoms, and other European countries. They stand on an exact level with the other Americans, whose ancestors were here in Colonial times. We are all part of the same people.

We all stand together for our common flag and our common country. We must so prepare that this country will be a good place in which the children's children of all of us shall live; and to do this we must so prepare that we can repel all foreign foes and preserve the inestimable right of settling for ourselves the fate of this mighty democratic Republic.

CONTROVERSY OVER KEATING BILL RECORDED

KEATING'S REPLY TO ATTACK ON
BILL BY BRITT OF NORTH CAROLINA PUBLISHED IN

The Child Labor Bulletin for May which has just been published contains the proceedings of the child labor conference held in Asheville, N. C., in February, which culminated in an attack on the Keating federal child labor bill by Congressman J. J. Britt of Asheville, and an answer to Mr. Britt by Congressman Keating himself. Mr. Britt's speech, at his own request, is not published, but a synopsis of its main arguments is given and Mr. Keating's reply is printed in full. Mr. Keating shows that Mr. Britt's constitutional arguments are wrong, and asks if it is not "just a little strange that among all those splendid gentlemen who sit on the Republican side of the House, only two, when the vote came, found themselves under the spell of constitutionality" (a disease which Mr. Keating describes as playing "great havoc among statesmen and near-statesmen"). Parker of New Jersey and Britt of North Carolina were the only Republicans who voted against the bill and Mr. Keating asks if it is possible that they are "the only constitutional lawyers on the Republican side of the House and the only conscientious gentlemen." His speech ends with an appeal for a favorable vote in the Senate so that the Supreme Court may have a chance to pass on the measure, and he reminds his opponents that "if we are beaten in this Congress, we will bob up serenely in the next."

Other interesting features of the proceedings are the telegrams sent the National Child Labor Committee by the Southern Textile Association, and the arguments of Mr. Hudson C. Miller, secretary of the Southern Cotton Manufacturers' Association, against the Keating bill. That the sentiment in the south is predominantly for a federal child labor law is shown in the great number of strong speeches for it made by southerners. Their standpoint is

CONCRETE BLOCK TO REPLACE THE BILLOW COTTAGE AT YORK

A concrete block is to be built at planned to open the house in a short time for his third season, and had the cottage, which was burned Sunday morning, when three houses were completely destroyed by James O. Duff, owner of the property, stated that he would not rebuild until full, offer for the lot upon which stands the remains of the burned part and in case the deal is closed, a bungalow is to be built. The cottage was the last of the three to catch fire and Mr. and Mrs. Just were able to have much of their furniture saved. The stable in the rear was on fire at one time but was extinguished before there was much damage, while four summer houses on the opposite side of the street were partly burned.

Ed. Thorne of Somersworth, who owned the other house which was destroyed Sunday morning, will rebuild as soon as insurance can be adjusted and material and workmen procured.

well summarized by Dr. George T. Winston of Asheville, former president of the University of North Carolina, who says, "As a citizen of North Carolina by birth, by education, and by residence, as a Southern man, as a Democrat, as a states' rights man, I say, that if the fathers and mothers of little children will not take care of them, if the communities they live in will not take care of them, if their states will not take care of them, then in this name, let them have the protection and care of the great United States."

NOTABLY PEACE SPEAKERS AT LAKE MOHONK MEETING

Lake Mohonk, N. Y., May 18.—Daniel Smiley, host of the Lake Mohonk Conference on International Arbitration, welcomed the peace delegates to his hotel here today at the first session of the three day meeting. Many notable statesmen, pacifists, diplomats, and army and navy officers will speak.

The topic for the session this morning was "Possibilities of international co-operation in the creation or development of conciliatory, arbitral or judicial machinery for adjudication of international differences."

The speakers included James B. Scott, Secretary of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Dr. Lyman Abbott of New York, Edwin M. Hoephord, Law Librarian of Congress, and Walter C. Penfield of Washington, D. C., President Taft will address the conference tonight.

There doesn't seem to be anything new on the D. & M. strike situation but the railroad officials have quit denying that there is a strike.

DANIELS' PLAN FOR BATTLESHIPS TURNED DOWN

Washington, May 18.—The House navy committee today knocked out the five-year building program advocated by Secretary Daniels and agreed to a construction of five battle cruisers and no battleships, instead of two battleships and two battle cruisers, as recommended by the secretary.

The committee also voted for 20 submarines.

FIREMEN'S PLANS FOR MEMORIAL ARE COMPLETED

GRAVES OF DEPARTED MEMBERS OF THE DEPARTMENT WILL BE DECORATED BY COMMITTEE ON JUNE 11.

At the meeting of the Portsmouth Fire Department held at the Central fire house, the committee on the memorial exercises, held annually for the departed members of the department, reported their complete plans for the holding of their services on Sunday, June 11. The church services will be held at the Court street Christian church and the address will be delivered at the morning service at 10.30 by Rev. Percy W. Caswell, pastor of the church.

The men are to form at the Central Fire House before the service and will march over a short route, to be announced later, to the church, headed by the Eureka Drum Corps. The graves of the dead firemen lying in the several cemeteries, will be decorated by members of the committee before the parade and services.

Hot Water for Sick Headaches

Tells why everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it before breakfast.

Headache of any kind, is caused by auto-intoxication—which means self-poisoning. Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood, through the lymph ducts, excite the heart which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries and veins of the head producing violent, throbbing pain and distress, called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish and irascible, your meals sour and almost nauseating. Then you resort to acetanilide, aspirin or the bromides which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, drunk before breakfast for awhile, will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphate hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick and it is claimed that those who continue to flush out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment.

ROUTING FOR CRIPPLES.

Boston, May 19.—Under the auspices of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, more than 2000 crippled and orphaned children of Greater Boston will be given an outing at Nantasket Beach, June 7, by Chester I. Campbell, one of the best known automobile men in New England, and manager of the big Boston Automobile show. Each year Mr. Campbell arranges for this outing to the crippled and orphaned children, but this year's outing is planned to be run on a larger scale.

The affair is non-sectarian and the children are selected from the various institutions throughout Greater Boston. The task is a big one and automobile dealers have already begun to contribute the use of their cars and money for the outing expenses.

The biggest demand for cots in the history of this outing is noted at the present time.

We are "strong" on fifteen dollar suits; that is, we've lots of them and they are remarkably good values as they were all bought "before the rise" and they are dyed with "the old dyes," so we can guarantee the colors. This is especially important, "fast color," in the case of blue serges which must be "true blue" to satisfy the customer. We guarantee our $15 blue serge suits. All the checks, stripes, plaids and fancy mixtures are "fast" also.
